

Play offs - later than later than latest news

Controversy has hit RC Zürich as they prepare for their play-off game vs Hermance this weekend. As the team relaxed after training last night at their new sponsors Powerade bar, when suddenly, for some unknown reason “the golf ball” last seen on tour in Amsterdam made a surprise appearance. This caused shock amongst the boys and especially the new players who had never heard of, or experienced the power of the golf ball. New kid on the block Fraser was heard to ask after downing a very large carrot and mango energy drink, “Listen mate, so what the fk is this golf ball all about”.

City wiz-kid Yves was also disappointed with his treatment and felt he was being targeted by his “so-called” friends and commented that a person can only drink so much lettuce and pineapple shake before it makes it hard to drive home.

Several other people, strangely enough, seemly all wearing pink shirts were also caught up in this vitamin bonanza and even Sunny Boy 1st team captain Gary fresh from his latest modelling contract with Latex Weekly was asked to down his Gatorade.

Bar manager, ex-Miss Croatia, Paola, then called a halt to proceedings because she no longer wanted to be responsible for anyone’s excessive energy intake. This was dully noted by the players who thought that something was strange and suspected that Paola was watering down their drinks with Spice Gold.

Captain O’Graf shows that you can have too much Gatorade

Rumour has it that Gangster Rapper and Bananarama Fan Club President (Zürich branch) Hot lips Solanzo had something to do with the introduction of the golf ball but this was strongly denied by his spokesperson Angus speaking from his caravan at the camp site underneath the motorway bridge.